GEORGE VEST TRIPLETT

THE present editor of the Frankfort Dai ly Capital, Hon George Vest Triplett, was born in that city January 30, 1856, and la a son of Hon, R & Triplett, now Stata Sen ator from the Owaneboro district After attending the theensboro schools, Mr. Triplett went to College at Lexington dur ing the session of 1874-5 and afterwards en tered Central University at Richmond. where he graduated both In the University and Law School Entered the senior class of Yale College in 1876, but afterwards returned to Richmond and was admitted to the bar in June, 1876. Returning to Owens. boro, he practiced his profession till 1879. when he became re-latent editor of the Enminer newspaper there. In 1880 hwent to Washington and for a time held an editorial p situm on the Daily Post but returned to O vensh so the same year, and the following very matabli-hed the I'd which he edited till 1883, and made a most excellent paper. BENARES, INDIA, Feb. 10, 1886 [CONTINUED FROM LAST ISSUE.]

Our bright boy Captain (he is only 19, with the down just prettily peeping from upper lip and chie) la very communicative, and answers all our questions with perfect frankness. He doesn't seem to know how very handsome he is, and what faultless teeth he displays, every time his finely curved lips break into a pleasant they are almost womanly in their heauty, only he never gives us the idea of estaminacy ln his make up, for his stature is thor oughly mauly and his eye is an eagle's.

I want my readers to know him, for (D V.) he will yet appear again and again in our aubsequent lives, as he has promised to write to me regularly, and I hope much, from future correspondence with so Intelthirsty for knowledge of the best thingsthough, as yet, he knows not in what direction they are to be found.

mir la absolutely disgusting to read the weak attempts to make capital for themselves now indulged in by the lawntakers, both in Congress and in the Legislature, on the labor question. Little arees, who have nothing to entitle them to public notice except the longness of their cars and their sbility to bray, are trying to make a record that will catch the vote of the poor, downtrodden laboring man and give themselves another lease of power to draw the public pap. All the talk in the Kentucky Ligislature about convict labor la the abecreat nonsense and demagogy and those who air institution. themselves mostly on it are doing it solely for their own advancement. The came may be said about those Congressmen who voted and argued for the O'Neill arbitration hill, which, notwithstanding its doubtfni constitutionality and the demoralizing effects on labor which would result from its becoming a law, passed the Honse by the overwhelming vote of 195 to 30. Col. Breckinridge was the only Kentucky Congressman who bad the courage to vote against it.

THE sentiment ln favor of the ensctment of a whipping-poet iaw is growing all over the State and if the Legislature does its dnty it will pass such a law. SACRIFICIAL AND EFFIGY MOUNDS IN WISCONSIN AND ELSEWHERE.

Half the Indian Mounds Pointed Out Are Not Gennine-Asiatic Origin of the People Who Mined Copper in the Lake Superior Region.

In the realms of archaeology and ancient history there are many shapeless things that give to the mind no clew by which they can be identified, but no figure in the whole gamut is more vague than an Indian mound. One authority speaks of an Indian mound as a common grave, such as one meets with in any cemetery. The average farmer, driving his city guest over country roads points with his whip into an adjacent field at a circular hillock, with the base like a charcoal pit and r.sing more gradually to a point near the top, saying: "That's an Indian mound." As the guest shows his interest in the subject and strains his eyes to catch sight of the object, the accommodating farmer keeps pointing out the mounds every little way. In truth, half the mounds pointed out are not genuine, or if they are no one knows about it, as they have never been opened. It is scarcely plausible to asaert that the ludians passed all their time building mounds. If they did, they might have been in better business.

A traveler who has ridden, fast and far in company with inventive drivers, and who has had things palmed off on him as Indian mounds that would have made the ladders turn in their graves, had an interview with an eminent searcher after mounds on the subject. He said that he was convinced, as far as any one could be convinced, when tangible proofs were wanting, of the Aslatio origin of the people who mined their copper on the south shore of Lake Superior and earlier still on Isle Royale, and who built what is known as Aztalan. "There is a great varlety of mounds in the state," he said, "hut all divisions that have been made yet are not to be depended on. The earliest that were built were the sacrificial mound; and the mounds of adoration The latter were buil' so that the rising and setting sun could be seen from them. They were invariably built round. The sacrificial mounds were a juare, as their remains indicate. The size of the mounds depended on the ease with which the soil could be moved. There are also round mounds in which a great many skeletons are found when they are opened. SACRIFICIAL, EFFIGY AND BURIAL MOUNDS.

"The sacrificial mounds are not very elenty in this part of the state, nor, in fact, any part. The rematus of one are located on the east bank of the Chippewa river, near Beef Slough, and another on the point of land at the confluence of the Red Cedar and Chetek rivers, in northern Wisconsin A path of effigy mounds has been traced from Chetek like to Cedar lake, in Barren county. In a swamp west of Chetek lake, flooded by water now, is the old road the early caravans used to travel. These traces are all that remain of the race that worked the early copper mines on Lake Superior. In Wisconsin by far the larger proportion are elligy mounds, while in Ohio the animal mounds do not probably number a halfdozen, and the largest one of them is entirely separated from the inclosures. Two bird mounds occur in Putnam courty, Georgia. With these exceptions the effigy mounds belong to one locality and to a people who had not the characteristics of contemporary nations. It is also probable that the people who built the mounds were not the same who constructed the burlal mounds. It is the remains of the effigy mounds that we want the state to appropriate money to pur-

"How much land would it take?" "About 30) acres in different parts of the state. It is the square mounds that are the most significant, as their relative positions show the way the people traveled.

Alluding to the unagnitude of the work done by this strange people, be said that the excavation on Isle Royale, Lake Superior, showed that thousands of men had worked there at a time.

"Whole cartloads of hammers were found there. In Outonagon county and at Ke waunee Point, on the south shore of the lake, the excavation extends for fifty miles. The Indians of the present day are n different race, for the work of the copper inlines was abandoned several hundred years ago. In fact, it is nry theory that the conquest of Mexico by Cortes and the shutting down of work in the copper mines was at the same

"I noticed the other day some cattle he.e iu Jack-onville, and thought that, aside from their leanness, and diminutive size, there was something elso peculiar about them, and studied for some time, until 1 suddenly discovered there were some of them minus tails; others loked as though they had about half of that useful appendage cut off. In a country where flies and uius jultoes are so plentiful as they must be here. I should think it no less than downright cruelty for people to treat the poor creatures in this shameless manner.

My renures were greeted with a roar of hughter. Bless your heart, my young friend, the people don't do that: It's the alli-"Alligators!" said 1, astonished. How enu that be! "Oh, they grab them when the are feeding in the water. You see they or ep up so quietly that the cattle do not notice their approach, and the first tiling the animal is aware of is a jer : in the rear. He tries to get nway, but it is of no use; the harder he pulls the fighter the alligator holds on, until the appendage gives way, and the conqueror so ims off happy."-The Present.

What Distaell Wrote of Webster. Here is a glinto se of Daniel Webster and the usual eer with which Distaeli writes of Americans: "I dined with Lyn hurst reconfly to meet Webst r, who is, I believe, considered a very reduct and spiritual Yunkee, but seered to me a complete Brother Jonathan -a remarkable twang as 'ty-rannical' an I all that; he also goes to the levee. A line brow locty, troad and beetle l-deep-set eyes and a swarthy complexion. He is said, when warmed, to be their greatest prator. Simingford was there, very niry and sparsling; all the rest American's and principally relatives. A good story, and true, from ham asked Webster verbally to dine with him, and went him a card next day, headed 'To remind.' Webster immediately answered by suother card, headed 'Tc arknowledge. Very American, don't you think?"-Ex-

WANTED A BROILED BEEFSTEAK.

A Sacred Subject to a Texas Hulel-Keenet

-Indignant Cowboys-Silenced. At San Antonio-storiel San Antonio, where Davy Crockett fell, and Maj. Bowie fell, and where cruel Santa Anna made the est city in America after St. Augustine-at San Antonio, I was going on to say, some of the cowboys persuaded a western-bound old gentleman to call for a brolled beefsteak. And surely it is an innocent thing to ask for a broiled beefsteak. For is not this the great cattle lan l! It is true we have no milk here. It is likewise true that the tons and hundreds of tons of oleomargarine which Chicage blandly professes to ship to New York is shipped to Texas, and even so far as down here in Chibualina, Mexico. But why may a man not ask for a brolled beefsteak in classic and storled San Autonio without having a tight on his hands.

He ause-simply because the old mnn who keeps the cowboy hotel here, and where so many of the honest travelers go to find the cowboy in all his glory, does not believe in "hnrning up" a boefsteak, as he calls it. He is an old man and an honest man, he says, and has kept a hotel for forty years; and ho says: "A man that will broll a beefsteak will steal a horse. Fry it; yes, sah, fry it in its native taller! Saur Houston fried his steak; so did Davy Crockett; so did Maj. Howie, sah." You must und erstand that the cowboys, knowing the old man's peculiarity on this theme, the sacred subject of beefsteak, had many a time before taken strangers there with their heads full of praise for the broiled beefsteak of this anciont and uot very elegant hotel. You must also bear in mind that Bob Ingursoll has a tremendous following when he says he boys had persuaded to go to this old hotel to get a broiled beefsteak, was one of Hob Ingersoll's disciples, so far as frying a beefsteak was concerned. And his face was a bouquet of smiles as we all sat down; and he murmured a blessing to his plate, and then lifted his head, and, all sweetness, asked the venerable host of the ancient hotel for one of his famous brolled heefsteaks!

Put in the exclanation points here, for I can do no justice to what followed: The cowboys rolled to the floor, and roared as they rolled. It was the battle of the San Jacinto over again; worse than that, it was the massacre of the Alamo!

That old hotel-keeper dug up all the old, lron-clad, and rusty oaths to be found in Toxas, and they are numerous, and let thear fly at the gool, gray head of that meek man with the white necktie.

The cowboys dld not dive, but disappeared into the nearest saloon, and left me and the meek little old man sitting there under such hailstorm of blekory-bark oaths as I never heard before, and I have been nround a heap. We were still in Texas. - Joaquin Miller in Chicago Times.

The Manufacturing of Scaling-Wax. The basis of all the different varieties of scaling-way, a technical journal states, is rieliac and Venice turpentine. Fine red codling-wax is made as follows Melt cautiously four ounces of very pale shellac in he at the lowest temperature of heat that will be ne essary to milt it. When the sheilae is melted stir into it one and oue quarter ounces of warme t Venice turpentine, hell sure." and then three ounces of vermillion. The heat should be so maintained as to be just sufficient to permit of the thorough incorporation of the constituents. of sealing wax of commerce the sticks are removed from the moulds in which they are sast and placed in other moulds of polished stoel, which may be engraved with the itionits the prescher went with the Jud, e name or brand of the maker, and with any to his home, where wine casks and bot desired ornamentation. The steel moulds are heated just enough to melt the surface of the sealing-wax, and the sticks thus nequire, when cooled, a beautiful glossy surface. Different colors are obtained by the in orporation of suitable colors instead of the vermillion as above.
